

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus to format and process a Media Key Block so as to reduce latencies when processing the Media Key Block. A new record is generated containing header information for the records comprising the Media Key Block. This new record is read just once and allows a device to skip seeking and reading each record header individually. In addition, the records are adjusted so that individual records or individual fields within a record always fit within a single transfer unit.